

Inkpots visits 2021/22

Gill Pawley runs Inkpots Writing Workshops and is an experienced workshop facilitator and creative mentor, working with individual young people, schools and organisations for young people. Gill is also a writer and editor of many years' experience and some of her clients include the Scout and Guides Associations, NSPCC and the National Youth Bureau. (And whisper this very quietly – she's also writing her first book for children...)

For the coming year we have two workshops on offer. (School key stage 2/ 8 – 11 years):

Book chat

- Introduction about Gill and her reading journey
- Check in about everyone's favourite authors
- Why we love series of books (with some recommendations)
- Favourite mystery stories
- New books for the coming season
- Book review tips.

Storytelling session

- The different kinds of writing we all like to do
- Different ways we can tell stories – and the importance of doing so
- Good practice – regular work/research/editing (including free download sheet with tips)
- Warming up your writing session.

These sessions can also be adapted for older students in school key stage 3/11 – 14 years. In addition, Gill runs a workshop on developing a creative toolkit to help deal with worries and anxiety. Please email for further details.

Each session last approx. 40 minutes and costs £50.

Gill is DBS checked and fully insured. Audience size limits apply to online groups and will be agreed beforehand.
